discovers counting is dedicated to David Rice. He is the youngest of three brothers. He and one other brothers are teachers. The third works for IBM. His mom was in education and his dad worked for the post service.

When we met, he was teaching high school biology. I'm told, his students would often comment on how fun he made learning. Parents have said, he was the only reason their children went to school instead of dropping out. Don't watch him as he walks to his car at seven in the morning. He's on autopilot. But by the time the first bell rings, he has his smile going and the energy to make his students want to learn.
